GIVE UP!

- There are a number of phrasal expressions, ranging from phrasal adverbs (under my skin), phrasal nouns (make-up), phrasal adjectives (spot on), phrasal verbs (call off) to phrasal prepositions (in front of).
- A Phrasal Verb is a verb consisting of two or more parts; a verb and another particle (typically an adverb or preposition). Unlike prepositions, particles often change the meaning of the verb they combine with:
 - Verb + Preposition ► I ran out the door. (I left quickly)
 - Phrasal Verb ► Can I borrow some paper? I ran out. (I used all my paper)
- Most are formed from a small number of common verbs (such as get, go, come, play, put and set) and a small number of adjectives (set free), nouns (play house), adverbs (run away), prepositions (put up with) or a combination of them (bark up the wrong tree).
- Phrasal verbs sometimes have meanings that can easily be guessed (such as sit down or look for).
- But in most cases their meanings are quite different from the meaning of the verb they are formed from: for example hold up can mean 'to cause a delay' or 'to try to rob someone' and has no obvious connection with the idea of 'holding' something.

What is a phrasal expression?

- Transitive phrasal verbs take objects. Most transitive phrasal verbs are separable; that is, we can put an object noun after the phrasal verb or between the verb and the particle.
 - Verb + particle + noun ► She turned on the light.
 - Verb + Noun + Particle ► They turned the light on.
- If the object of a separable transitive phrasal verb is a pronoun, it must separate the verb and the particle. It cannot follow the phrasal verb.
 - She turned it on.
 - She turned on it. (incorrect)
- Some transitive phrasal verbs are inseparable; that is, you cannot place the object between the verb and the particle.
 - She looked after the children NOT She looked the children after
 - She looked after them NOT She looked them after
- Some inseparable transitive phrasal verbs consist of three words. The verb + particle is followed by a preposition. The object always follows the preposition, as in cut down on, drop out of, get on with, go along with, put up with, run out of, stick up for...
- Intransitive phrasal verbs do not take objects.
 - We grew up overseas.
 - He dropped by yesterday.
